The Center for Research on College-Workforce Transitions and the Morgridge Center for Public Service are co-sponsoring a workshop and discussion with New York University Professor Gary Anderson for UW-Madison students, staff, and faculty who are conducting or planning to conduct Community-Based Participatory Action Research.

Gary L. Anderson is Professor of Educational Leadership at New York University's Steinhardt School of Culture, Education, and Human Development. A former high school teacher and principal, he has published on topics such as critical ethnography, participatory action research, new policy networks, and the new professional. His recent books include The Politics of Education Policy in an Era of Inequality with Sonia Horsford & Janelle Scott (2019, Routledge) and The Action Research Dissertation with Kathryn Herr (2014, Sage).

The Center for Research on College-Workforce Transitions (CCWT) is an initiative of the Wisconsin Center for Education Research (WCER). CCWT's mission is to conduct and support research, critical policy analysis, and public dialogue on how college students experience the transition to the workforce. CCWT strives to inform policies, programs, and practices that promote academic and career success for all learners.
